

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

My name is Alicia Bonikowske. I am commenting on your recent ruling about net neutrality. I think the rules and regulations that were established during Obama should be reestablished.

I want net neutrality. I do not believe that companies should be allowed to rule themselves and that it be assumed that they will be fair and not take advantage of the system. Every business person knows that to not take advantage in a possible legal money-making scheme that could promote your profit margins is silly. I do not trust most businesses to take advantage of this situation.

I do not believe this will allow more investment and create more jobs. To say so, with significant research, is biased. The FCC should be an unbiased organization and provide a safe, fair set of regulations for media to interchange across devices.

I believe that the FCC has moved away from the goal of their organization. And that the FCC puts too much faith in the decisions made by businesses. In short, I believe that net neutrality should be reinstated.

Thank you,

Alicia Bonikowske
